Introduction

Mrs. John S. Welborn, Regent, Alexander Martin Chapter D. A. R., High Point, North Carolina, spearheaded a cemetery reading project in the 1930s. Every old cemetery in Randolph County was not surveyed. The value of the project was that some of these tombstones have since been lost, either through the church moving or through neglect or weathering of the stone. Please be aware that these cemeteries were read in order to aid in proving D. A. R. lineage. Often children and unmarried people were skipped. There are many inaccuracies in the dates. We do not believe the readings were double checked. We have some hesitation in publishing inaccurate material. However, we do believe there is enough information contained herein to help many people find members of their families.

Many individual members of the D. A. R. read these cemeteries, and alphabetized them. The lists were then typed by many typists with carbons. Books were distributed to the D. A. R. Library in Washington, D.C., and some local libraries received copies. The Randolph Room copy was photocopied from an original at the D. A. R. Library in Washington. The North Carolina State Library had a copy. We have learned that our copy does not match the one at the State Library. Obviously there were multiple copies made by many typists, and the opportunity to copy dates incorrectly would be great. In the Randolph Room, our volumes bear the numbers Volume I, Volume II, and Volume III, and 1965. They have been copied and recopied until now they are difficult to read.

We thank the D. A. R. for this invaluable work and have permission of the Colonel Andrew Balfour Chapter D. A. R. in Asheboro, North Carolina for permission to retype, print and make available to the public this body of work that relates to Randolph County, North Carolina.

We have tried to amplify the original by listing current site locations of the cemeteries and the original sources of D. A. R. data in the Asheboro-Randolph County Library.

Marsha Farlow Haithcock, staff member in the Randolph Room of the Asheboro-Randolph County Library, saw the need to retype the D. A. R. copies in our possession, and did some of the typing. Charles Jeffrey Haithcock did some of the typing. Carol Bullins spent days on the typing project. The Randolph County Genealogical Society recognized the need to publish the work they had done. Jackson Davis reformatted the computer entries and spearheaded this project. Laverne Brady Davis edited the material and typed some additional cemeteries that were read by Guilford Battle Chapter D. A. R., Greensboro, North Carolina in 1965. In our county these are: Dorsett, Foust, Parks-Stout or Greenwood, Rains-Caviness, and Waddell cemeteries. Betty Leach Brown prepared the listing of cemeteries that were published in our Genealogical Society Journals from 1977 through 1995. These readings are accurate and have later burials than those read by the D. A. R. Members of the Randolph County Genealogical Society Board of Directors proofread this reprint.

* These cemeteries were listed by the D. A. R. as being on Route 90, which does not exist any more. Finally, in a Redding obituary in our vertical files, we found that Route 90 was identified as the stage coach route from Raleigh to Salisbury, and is presently called the Old Lexington Road.

Below are listed the cemeteries in this book and the volume and page of the D. A. R. records in the Randolph Room of the Asheboro-Randolph County Library where the originals of these Randolph cemeteries are to be found.
